

Dr. Macdonald is Professor of Surgery, Division of Neurosurgery, University of Toronto. Before that I was at University of Chicago for first job 1993 – 2006. He conducts clinical and translational research on the pathophysiology and treatment of subarachnoid hemorrhage, chronic subdural hematoma and vascular instability in cavernous malformations and brain microbleeding. He has written about 250 peer-reviewed publications, 2 books, and about 400 reviews, editorials and other published papers and has or has had grant funding from National Institutes of Health, American Heart Association, Canadian Institutes for Health Research and others.